

Flooding – message from Thames Valley Police

Neighbourhood policing officers continue to be out in force working alongside partner agencies to help those of you affected by the floods.

Although we have seen more stable weather today, flood levels are anticipated to rise again due to the rain water already in the systems and further rain anticipated in the week ahead.

People are urged to stay prepared to the threat of flooding and ready to respond to the information being made available to them by all the agencies involved in the flood relief efforts.

Sandbag defences and temporary flood defences put in place over the past week will remain as they are and people are urged not to tamper or remove these.

We anticipate flood levels to reach their highest on Wednesday though these will not be higher than those already experienced.

These increased levels will remain for a few days but we do not expect any properties that haven't already flooded to be impacted. However, those that have flooded may be flooded again.

Flooded areas represent a risk to personal safety and as we move into half term week we are advising people to stay away from those areas affected.

Flood warning and alerts on waterways are issued by the Environment Agency. Latest information can be found on their website <http://www.environment-agency.gov.uk/homeandleisure/floods/>
